I hold a PhD in Corporate Governance from RMIT University, Melbourne, Australia, with a BA, BCom (1st Class Hons), and Grad Dip Bus in Marketing and International Business from The University of Auckland.

After several years in corporate management, I have had a long career as a university academic and lecturer, most recently in a professorial role at AUT where I taught corporate governance in the MBA programme as well as for the Australian Chartered Professional Accounting qualification, and various management subjects at undergraduate and postgraduate levels. I continue to work on academic research collaborations with international colleagues. My research and published scholarly work focuses on board behaviour, the role of governance in stakeholder engagement, board leadership in sustainability and corporate social responsibility, as well as governance in small firms and urban governance.

I am a Chartered Fellow of The Chartered Governance Institute (CGI) – a global professional organisation based in London – and Fellow of the Institute's New Zealand Division. I held the position of Vice President of Governance New Zealand (GNZ) in 2019 and presently serve as a director on the Board of GNZ. I am also a member of its Education Performance Standards Committee – a position I held as Chair over many years – responsible for the monitoring, moderation and oversight of the Institute's internationally recognised Chartered Professional Qualification in Corporate Governance. I have recently been appointed to the Institute's Performance Standards Committee with monitoring and oversight responsibility for the qualification for all of CGI's divisions across the globe.

My governance experience includes directorships on various not-for-profit boards in New Zealand, including the NZ Contemporary China Research Council comprising senior academic representatives from across NZ universities, government ministries and agencies. Other board roles have included international and regional trade- and economics-related organisations.

My previous corporate executive and general management experience was with the New Zealand divisions of large multinational corporations and with small professional practices. I was also a strategy and business consultant and business mentor in the SME sector for several years.
