

Letizia Palumbo

Letizia Palumbo is a Research Fellow at MPC and is currently coordinating a research project funded by Open Society European Policy Institute (OSEPI) on working conditions of migrant workers in the agricultural sector in Germany, the Netherlands and Sweden. From 2014 to 2019 she was a Research Associate at the Global Governance Programme, taking part in several projects concerning trafficking and exploitation of migrant workers, in sectors such as agriculture and domestic work. In 2018-2019, she participated in a project, funded by the OSEPI on the factors underlying the demand for irregular employment of migrant workers in Italian agriculture, often leading to exploitation. In 2015-2016 she was the main researcher on the project “Trafficking for Labour Exploitation: Assessing Anti-trafficking Interventions in Italy”, co-funded by the Open Society Foundations. In 2014-2015 she participated as national expert on trafficking in the study “Demand-side of Trafficking in Persons in the Domestic Work Sector”, part of the project “Addressing Demand in Anti-Trafficking Efforts and Policies (DemandAT)” (FP7 European Commission funded project). She was Post-Doctoral Researcher in Comparative Law at the University of Palermo (2013-2017) and she has been Adjunct Professor also at the University of Palermo, teaching “Urban and Migration Policies” (in 2019), “Human Rights and International Justice” (in 2017) and “Women’s Rights” (in 2014). She holds a PhD in Human Rights from the University of Palermo. Her research interests include human trafficking, gender and migration, labour exploitation and human rights. Her current research focuses on trafficking and labour exploitation in the agricultural and domestic work sectors in the EU, in particular in Italy. She also serves as a consultant and trainer on this subject.