

*Dirpolis Institute
Sant'Anna School of Advanced Studies, Pisa*

Second Call for Visiting and External Faculty Fellows 2020-2021

For the Strategic Project on “Governance for Inclusive Societies”

The DIRPOLIS INSTITUTE

The DIRPOLIS (Law and Political Sciences) Institute has a peculiar nature among the Sant'Anna School's Institutes. Contrary to almost all of the other Institutes, it has a strong interdisciplinary connotation as it brings together the Law and Political Sciences components of the School. Its faculty is currently composed of 27 members (11 full professors, 6 associate professors, 10 assistant professors). About 20 research assistants (Assegnisti di Ricerca) and about 10 staff persons dealing with administrative issues and/or as Course tutor, are currently working at DIRPOLIS on a temporary basis (most of them are entirely or to a significant amount financed through external funds). The DIRPOLIS Institute runs a yearly budget of about 2.5-3 million euro.

More information at: <https://www.santannapisa.it/en/institute/dirpolis/institute-law-politics-and-development>

As explicitly mentioned in the Sant'Anna School's Multi-Year Strategic Plan (MSP), the Scuola has identified the DIRPOLIS Institute as one of the actors which will spearhead federative activities with the Scuola Normale Superiore (SNS, notably with its Class of Political and Social Sciences, CPSS).

The Dirpolis Law and Political Sciences components aim at increasing their reputation and overall standing in both national and international contexts by being more focused and integrated.

THE STRATEGIC PROJECT ON ‘THE GOVERNANCE FOR INCLUSIVE SOCIETIES’

The Strategic Project is one of the tools the DIRPOLIS Institute intends to employ to create an academic environment which will enable the faculty to orient its research and teaching activities in light of the common theme identified (i.e. Governance for Inclusive Societies).

The aim is to reorient the activities of the remaining part of DIRPOLIS. This decision implements the recommendations contained in the latest report of the Institute International Advisory Board in which the Institute has been invited to develop a coherent academic identity so as to create a “corporate image”, which would make the Institute and its research and teaching outputs more recognizable.

In line with the Strategic Objectives stated above, the implementation of the present project will require, within the next three years, the adoption of coherent choices fostering of the Institute infrastructures, the recruitment of new staff members and the planning of educational and training activities.

All this is expected to contribute to the conduct of multidisciplinary, state-of-the-art research aimed at critically examining existing governance theories and practices, while at the same time developing innovative strategies that can be employed at various levels to effectively ensure democratic inclusion and respect for individual rights, as well as the development of educational paths on the above subjects’

THE VISITING FELLOWS PROGRAM

The DIRPOLIS Institute at the Sant’Anna School of Advanced Studies in Pisa invites outstanding scholars to apply for Visiting Professorships (for a period between 3 and 12 months), starting date between October 2020 and October 2021. Please note that the period of visiting could be subject to change, according to the evolution of Covid-19 health emergency and possible Italian law restrictions for the entry in the country.

The purpose of the Visiting and External Faculty Scholarship is to raise the Institute international profile through the development of teaching and research co-operation between Sant’Anna School of Advanced Studies and the faculties of partner universities and research centers. These activities have to be consistent with the above mentioned Strategic Project 2019-22 on ‘Governance for Inclusive Societies’.

Proposals have to be based on the collaboration between the visiting scholar and the Institute. Teaching and research activities have to be designed to contribute to the Dirpolis activity.

The Strategic Project serves as Leitmotiv of future teaching and research efforts and focuses on the study of forms of governance that ensure the realization of more inclusive societies. The inclusive model of governance that constitutes the scientific base of the Strategic Project encompasses some thematic areas (or pillars) upon which the faculty interprets and develops the concept of “Governance for inclusive Societies”, converging a coherent path of educational and research activities, which has already started to characterize the Institute:

- Democracy, Human Rights and the Rule of Law, whose activities will be mainly developed by the dialogue between public law and constitutional law, international law, legal theory, political philosophy, gender studies, political science, comparative law, and an inclusive European private law in the digital society (see e.g. our research already conducted on social services, welfare, family, public order, fragile statehood, dataveillance, digital personhood, human rights, and immigration).

- Integrity, whose activities will mainly deal with the area of criminal law, public policy analysis, ethics in research (see e.g. our research conducted on business integrity, human security, interplay between legal and ethical rules).
- Security and Governance of New Technologies and Risks, whose activities will be mainly addressed by the interplay of the areas of security studies, political philosophy, private law, comparative private law, international law (see e.g. our activities on crisis response, transnational threats, conflict management, data protection, IP, health, market and insurance);
- Sustainability, whose activities will be mainly developed by the area of agri-environmental law, private and public law (see e.g. our activities on food and environment, administrative law, and social inclusion and vulnerabilities).

DIRPOLIS welcomes applications for two types of visiting positions: 1) visiting senior scholar; 2) visiting junior scholar.
